AGED MT. PLEASANT WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED ON TROLLEYNot Known Whether She Died From Fright or Was Struck.*WAS ON WAY TO GROCERY STORE*Venerable Lady Had Been Affectionately Known as "Granny"—Her Tragic Death Mourned by Entire Mt. Pleasant Community.

Mrs. Margaret St. Hilaire, aged 70 years, was killed on the West Penn Street car track near Mount Pleasant yesterday afternoon. The aged woman, who at no time was to a greater group, stopped in the car track, as the heavy car in front of the Mount Pleasant Club. The woman, about a mile, was a widow, 70 years of age, it is believed that she was estranged from her husband, the man of the car.

There is a possibility, however, that the aged woman died from the shock when she saw the heavy car bearing down upon her. Mrs. St. Hilaire was unable to say definitely whether or not the car struck her in front. The body was not taken to the streets and was in no way mutilated.

Mrs. St. Hilaire, despite her advanced years, was a most remarkable woman and for years had been keeping house for her husband, Mr. and two sons throughout his life. A woman of wonderful vitality, her death has caused a genuine shock throughout the community. Her car had been falling and it is believed that in doing so or before the heavy car struck it was within a few inches of her.

Mrs. St. Hilaire had been married to her son, Samuel, "Sam" as he is known to the streets. A carpenter, Mr. Asa McFadden, had been working for the aged widow during the winter and was about to be married when informed of the tragic death. Mrs. St. Hilaire was born and reared in Mt. Pleasant. She is survived by the following children: Samuel and Jerry St. Hilaire, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. St. Hilaire, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. St. Hilaire.

The body was taken to the Ziegler embalming shop at Mt. Pleasant. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

THURSDAY EVE'G, AUG. 15, 1912.

THE BLOT.

The Johnstown Tribune
Early this morning before the sun rose seven men were taken one by one and put to death in Sing Sing prison.
The law had decreed that each one
of the seven had been concerned in the taking of a human life and, therefore,
should be made to pay the penalty.

Five of the seven went in their deaths crying out in their tortured miserable tongue that they were innocent;
that they had been given "no chance" to prove their innocence, that they were being murdered. One of the seven went to his death unconscious.
The great fear had frightened him so that he had fainted. Two friends and one 25-mile race.

Grounds is of More Than Usual Interest Here.

Westmoreland county's big fair at the Youngwood fair grounds on September 10, 11, 12 and 13 promises to be of more than usual interest to local people. Following the failure of the Dawson Driving Association to the cream of the racing game in Western Pennsylvania has been entered in the races. Large purses have been offered in a wide varying program.

In addition to horse racing the usual attractions will be in evidence.
Prizes in the live stock department have gone in great expense in arranging for two day motor cycling.
There will be one five mile race, two twelve and one 25-mile race.

Telephone Men Held Up by Woman.
MONONGAHELA, Aug. 15.—The construction men for the Bell Telephone Company have a job on their hands in Lawrence street which they are at their wits ends to put through in their own adventure. They are moving a pole from one location on the street to another and in the new location the pole could be directly in front of the gate leading into one of the residences of that neighborhood. One of the ladies of the house is determined that the pole shall not be placed in the new location, but compromises and
says that it can be placed at that corner
of the street. This does not suit
the company and the location they desire does not suit the resident. Hence the trouble. In the meantime the lady is contentedly on her porch with the guitar long already connected and in easy reach, determined to turn the pole on the first telephone man that lays hold.

the human must be treated as with the slaves the whole matter has the right to deliberately let out a human life. There is no margin in a

CHAPTER IX.

In which the Author Trespasses.

THIS narrative has quite as much to do with the Baselhurst side of the controversy as it has with Shaw's. It is therefore but fair that the heroic Baselhurst by Lord Cecil should receive equal consideration from the historian. Shaw's conquest of one member of the force opposing him was scarcely the result of bravery; on the other hand, Lord Cecil's dash into the enemy's country was the very nerve of intrepidity.

Down the drive and out into the mountain road clattered the three horsemen. Lady Baselhurst, watching at the window casement, almost swooned with amazement at the sight of them. The caps of their jaunty-sheen seemed to flaunt a satirical farewell in her face; their owners, following the light of the carriage lamps, swept from view around a bend in the road and bravely plunged into the dark territory over which the enemy ruled. It was the duke who finally brought the cavalcade to a halt by propounding a most sensible question.

"Are you sure she came this way, Cecil?"

"Certainly. This is Shaw's way, isn't it?"

"Did she say she was going to Shaw's?"

"Don't know. Evelyn told me. Ha! Ha! Basminster, come along. We'll never catch up to her."

"Is she riding?"

"No—horses all fat." "Do you know, we may have passed her? Come take it, Baselhurst, if she's running away from us, you don't know she'd be such a silly fool to stand in the road and wait for us. If she does, we shall hide among the trees."

"But she's been an hour's start of us."

"Where does she come to?" asked the count, with an anxious glance upward, just in time to catch a glimmering glimpse with his eye.

"She's fast it. We don't know," said the duke.

"But I must find her!" cried Lord Cecil. "Think of that poor girl alone in that terrible place, shivering, cold, and out there. Ha! Penelope!" he shouted in his most virulent treble. The shouting went round. Then the three of them recited her name. "God, who never best or dead or— Come on, Basminster. We must scour the whole damned valley."

"He has a wildcat tonight," said the duke in an aside to the little Frenchman, referring to his lordship. "Devereux, I'd rather not cross him. You seem to forget that his sister is out in all this fury."

"Not Dene, but I do not forget. I would give half my life to hold her in my arms these instant."

"Sir, I'd like her the other half if you'd let try such a thing. We didn't fetch you along to hold her. You've got to hold the horses, that's all."

"Possible! How dare you to speak to— What are you two rowing about? I demand his lordship. Come along! We're losing time."

Away they swept, Penelope's two riders resoundingly barking at one another about satisfaction at some future hour.

The storm burst upon them in all its fury—the maddest, wildest storm they had known to all their lives. Tumultuous, half drowned, blown almost from the saddles, the trio finally found shelter in the lee of a sheltering cliff just off the road. While they stood there shivering, clutching the bits of their well-nigh frantic horses, the glimmer of lights came down to them from windows farther up the steep. There was no calculating the three upright oblongs of light. They were tall windows in a house, the occupant of which doubtless had been aroused at this unearthly hour by the fierceness of the storm.

"We're done," lamented the duke, water running down his neck in floods, "what a luxury a home is, be it ever so humble, on a night like this."

"Mon Dieu, mon Dieu," groaned the count, "how comfort, my look! And here? Ha! Ha! Qui fait trembler la terre? I am sick! I die!"

"Penelope is out to all this," moaned his lordship.

"I am not so sure of that. There's a woman to find a place where she can't ruin her hat. My word for it, Cecil, Shaw's found a safe road. I say, by Jove! The duke was shivering more intensely than ever at the windows far above. "I have it! Isn't it rather odd that a house should be heated so hellishly at this hour of night?"

"Determined seconds forced to put out the lamps," groaned Baselhurst with an instant.

"Nonetheless I tell you what—monsieur has raised the house and asked shelter from the storm. Now, who could that be but Penelope?"

"By Jove, you're a clipping clever gal, after all. Basminster—a regular Sherlock Holmes! That's just it. She's been up there where the windows are. Come on. It's easy sailing now," cried his lordship, but the Duke restrained him.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whoa, house is hot."

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's house, and he hasn't been especially creditable—"

"Aha! See what I mean? Shaw's house is hot."

"I say, Devereux, step up and pound on the door."

and pound on the door. You've got a card, you know."

"One minute," exclaimed the count, dashing into the background.

"We might reconnoiter a bit," said Baselhurst. "Have a look at the rear, you know."

Around the corner of the house they trudged, finally bringing up at the back steps. The windows were not only dark, but boarded up. While they stood there amazed and uncertain, the rain came down again in torrents, worse than before if possible. They scurried for cover, plunging three abreast beneath the same steps that had sheltered Penelope and Shaw such a short time before.

"Dumb! Get off my foot!" roared the duke.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whoa, house is hot."

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's house, and he hasn't been especially creditable—"

"Aha! See what I mean? Shaw's house is hot."

It was not until they had explored the basement and found it utterly without signs of human occupancy that the truth of the situation began to dawn upon them. Baselhurst's face was white, and his voice shook as he ventured the horrid speculation: "The good Lord save us—it's that damned haunted house Pen was talking about!"

"But ze lights?" queried the count.

"Let's get out of this place," said Lord Baselhurst, moving toward the door. "It's that beastly Ronwood house. They say he comes back and murders her every night or so."

"Mon Dieu!"

"Penelope isn't here. Let's move on," agreed the duke readily. But even fear of the supernatural was not strong enough to drive them out into the blinding storm. "I say, look ahead, there's Shaw's place!"

Peering through the door they saw for the first time the many lights in Shaw's windows, scarce a quarter of a mile away. For a long time they stood and gazed at the distant windows. Dejectedly they sat down, backs to the wall and waited for the storm to spend its fury. Wet, cold and tired, they finally dozed. It was Lord Cecil who first saw the signs of dawn. The rain storm had come to a mysterious end, but a heavy fog in its stead loomed up. He aroused his companions and with many screams of anguish they prepared to venture forth into the white wall beyond them.

Just as they were taking a last look at the wretched edifice something happened that would have brought terror to the stoutest heart. A wild, apalling shriek came from somewhere above, the cry of a mortal soul in agony. The next instant three human forms shot through the narrow door and out into the fog, hair on end, eyes blinding, but sightless; legs traveling like the wind and as purposeless. It mattered not that the way was hidden; it mattered less that weeds, brush and stumps lurked in ambush for unwary feet. They fled into the foggy darkness without a thought of what lay before them, only of what struck them.

Upstairs Randolph Shaw lay back against the wall and shook with laughter. Penelope's convulsed face was glued to the kitchen window, her eyes peering into the fog beyond. Shadowy figures leaped into the white mantle; the crash of brush came back to her ears, and then, like the barking of a dog, there arose from the mystic gray the last diminishing cry:

"Help! Help! Help!" Growing fainter and sharper, the cry at last was lost in the phantom desert.

They stood at the window and watched the fog lift, gray and forlorn, until the trees and road were discernible. Then arm in arm they set forth across the wet way toward Shaw's cottage.

"Poor Cecil!" she sighed. "It was cruel of you." In the roadway they found a hat which she at once identified as the count's. Farther on there was a carriage lamp and later a matchbox, which had been cast aside as an impediment. "Oh, it was cruel!" she smiled, however, in retrospect.

"If I were only sure that nothing serious had happened to Cecil," she murmured anxiously.

"I'm sorry, dear, for that screach of mine," she apologized.

Suddenly he started and gazed intently in the direction of the haunted house. A man—a sorry figure—was slowly, painfully approaching from the edge of the wood scarce a hundred yards away. In his hand he carried a stick to which was attached a white cloth—doubtless a handkerchief. He was batless and limped perceptibly.

"It's Cecil!" whispered Penelope in horror, struck to the heart. "Good heaven, Randolph, go to him! He is hurt."

It was Lord Baselhurst. As Shaw hurried down the drive to meet him, no thought of the feud in mind, two figures even more hopelessly dilapidated ventured from the wood and bobbed up behind the truculent bear, who had now paused to lift his shoulders into a position of dignity and defiance. Shaw's heart was touched. The spectacle was enough to melt the prejudice of any adversary. Lord Cecil's knees trembled. His hand shook as if in a chill. Mind covered, wiser soled and blinded, their clothes rent in many places, their hats gone and their hair matted, their legs wobbly, the trio certainly inspired pity, not mirth nor scorn.

"One moment, sir," called his lordship, with a feeble attempt at severity. His voice was hoarse and shaky. "We do not come as friends, dem you. Is my sister here?"

"Sho! Lord Baselhurst. We'll talk this over later on," said Shaw in his friendliest way. "You are worn out and done up, I'm sure—you and your friends. Come, I'm not as bad as you think."

"I've changed my mind since I saw you last. Let's see if we can't come to an amicable understanding."

"New KENSINGTON, Pa., Aug. 15.—Arrived on a charge of boggart, David L. McCollum, of Kittanning, Pa., attempted to choke himself to death with his necktie in the police station here yesterday.

McCollum was attracted here by the 14th annual convention of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen, just before daybreak he made another attempt to kill himself.

It needs but little imagination to see him hurry off down the lane, halles and in slippers, to await events, while he dreams of exploiting the jewels of the Golconda or the silver mines of the new world.

The Banana.

The banana plant bears fruit every year. It is one of the most productive plants in the world and feeds more people than any other known to man.

It has been estimated that more than a third of the human race depend almost wholly for their existence upon the banana. That the fruit is amply able to sustain life, and to sustain it in a very satisfactory manner, is demonstrated by the fact that the millions who live on practically nothing else get along very well with it and appear to be as strong and active as those who live on other kinds of food.

Penelope came down from the porch to meet them. Without a word she took her brother's arm. He stared at her with growing resentment.

"Dumb! Get off my foot!" roared the duke.

"Zounds! Who are you punching?"

"I'm not! I'm not! What's this?"

"Come in. It's easy sailing now," said his lordship, but the Duke restrained him.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whoa, house is hot."

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's house, and he hasn't been especially creditable—"

nestly. "She shan't treat my sister like this again."

"No," said Shaw from the other side; "she shan't."

"By Jove, Shaw, are you with me?" demanded his lordship in surprise.

"Depends on whether you are with me," said the other. Penelope flushed.

Hot coffee, chops, griddle cakes and maple syrup soon put the contending forces at their ease. Baselhurst so far forgot himself as to laugh merrily at his host's jokes. The count responded in his most piquant dialect, and the duke swore by an ever useful Lord Harry that he had never tasted such a breakfast.

"By Jove, Pen," exclaimed his brother.

"No," said Shaw from the other side; "it's almost a sin to take you away from such good cooking as this."

"You're not going to take her away, however," said Shaw. "She's come to stay."

"Want—what the devil do you mean, sir?" demanded Lord Cecil, his coffee cup shaking so violently that the contents overflowed.

"She's going over to Pittsburg with me today, and when she comes back she'll be Mrs. Randolph Shaw."

she will be Mrs. Randolph Shaw. That's what I mean, your lordship."

Three of his listeners shrank with amazement and then couched painfully. Feebly they set their cups down and gulped as if they had something to swallow. The duke was the first to find his tongue, and he was quite at a loss for words.

"D—by Jove," he said blankly, "that's damned hot coffee!"

"Is this true, Penelope?" gasped his lordship.

"Yes, Cecil. I've promised to marry him."

"It isn't because you feel that you have no home with me?"

"I love him. It's a much older story than you think," she said simply.

"I say, that hits me hard," said the duke with a wry face. "Still, I join in saying, God bless you."

"We're trying to end the feud, you see," said Penelope.

Tears came into his lordship's pale eyes. He looked first at one and then at the other and then silently extended his hand to Randolph Shaw. He wrung it vigorously for a long time before speaking. Then, as if throwing a weight off his mind, he remarked: "I say, Shaw, I'm sorry about that dog. I've got an English bull terrier down there that's taken a ribbon or so. If you don't mind, I'll send him up to you. He—he knows Penelope."

THE END.

BALZAC'S BACK DOOR.

It Was Convenient When Creditors Came Too Instant.

In the year 1848 or thereabout, being worried by debts in Paris, Balzac took lodgings in Passy, then a village in the environs, at a house in the Rue Basle. There is little remarkable about the front of the house. It is just a plain, white, two storied French dwelling of hundred years ago or of today for that matter.

But at the back is a garden, and at the bottom of the garden is a doorway leading into one of the oldest lanes in the world, from the look of it. Truly, this ruelle, with its crumbling walls of stone and plaster, its ivy and its shade of overhanging trees, is as happily devoid of suggestions of modern "improvements" as anything to be found within the suburbs of Paris.

By means of this byway Balzac, when instant voices from within the house reached his ears as he worked in his little pavilion at the end of the garden, could avoid the unpleasantness of an interview with any holder of the overdues bills which throughout his life were the only tangible results of his experiments as a printer and typefounder.

It needs but little imagination to see him hurry off down the lane, halles and in slippers, to await events, while he dreams of exploiting the jewels of the Golconda or the silver mines of the new world.

Penelope came down from the porch to meet them. Without a word she took her brother's arm. He stared at her with growing resentment.

AGED MT. PLEASANT WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED ON TROLLEY

Not Known Whether She Died From Fright or Was Struck.

WAS ON WAY TO GROCERY STORE

Venerable Lady Had Been Affectionately Known as "Granny"—Her Tragic Death Mourned by Entire Mt. Pleasant Community.

Mrs. Margaret Stimpole, aged 80 years, was killed on the West Penn street car tracks near Mount Pleasant yesterday afternoon. The aged woman, who was on her way to a grocery store, stepped on the car tracks just as the heavy car in charge of Motor man Albert Trout, running down a grade, was within a few feet of the car. It is believed that the car struck Mrs. Stimpole, whose body was taken from beneath the tracks and out of the car.

There is a possibility, however, that the aged woman died from the shock when she saw the heavy car bearing down upon her. Motor man Trout is not able to say definitely whether or not the car struck the woman. The body was not hit by the wheels, and was taken from beneath the tracks and out of the car.

Mrs. Stimpole, despite her advanced years, was a most remarkable woman and for years had been keeping house for her two sons, Samuel and Jerry Stimpole, who was an eccentrically known throughout the community as "Granny" and ward of her tragic death was speeded to some small children who ran along the tracks crying "Granny is dead."

Mrs. Stimpole had been warned by her son, Samuel, to never go to get to the store. A day or two ago Anna McKeith, the housekeeper, had noticed her during the morning and was almost prostrated with fear informed of the tragic death. Mrs. Stimpole was born and reared at Mt. Pleasant. She is survived by the following children: Samuel and Jerry Stimpole, and Mrs. Barbara Curtis of Fayette county, and Mrs. John Pease of Scottsdale.

The body was taken to the Zinner mortuary at Mt. Pleasant. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

OPERATION FOR APENDICITIS ON SMITH IS UNSUCCESSFUL

CONNELLSVILLE SHOPS WILL NOT BE MOVED TO NEWCASTLE

TO EXHUME THE BODY OF WOMAN'S FORMER HUSBAND

In the Hope of Confirming Suspicion of Murder of Second Spouse.

United Press Telegram.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Acting on information from New York, the coroner today gave orders to exhume the bodies of Frederick Hartman and his two Hartman children, test husband and stepchildren of Mrs. Frederick Hartman-Trost, the German saloon keeper who, with her late husband, Edmund Gnucke, is held for the death of her second husband, Frederick Trost.

The viscera of the Hartman father and children will be examined and it is expected that if the suspicion of Christian Hartman of New York, that his brother died in February, 1911, of poison, proves correct, it will furnish additional evidence that Trost was murdered. The aged New Yorker states that his brother died under mysterious circumstances, similar to those surrounding the death of Trost, and the actions of the woman and Gnucke at that time were the same after the death of Trost.

Gnucke's application for release on a writ of habeas corpus was set for hearing today, and the Coroner's docket announced that if freed, he will be immediately rearrested on new evidence. Anticipating that her defense might be insanity, the attorney today set two expert attempts to search Mrs. Trost and she was closely guarded that she might not obtain any weapon or drug by which she might take her life.

Trost died suddenly and mysteriously eight days after his marriage and it is said the post mortem examination showed traces of arsenic in his stomach. It was also learned that Mrs. Trost bought arsenic, a will was made by the widow, leaving Trost's property to her. It was declared by friends of Trost that the signature to the will was not his, and that furthermore, he told them he never made a will.

FIREMEN DELEGATES, SAYS BXLER, REFUSED TO STICK

Everybody Wore Connellsville Badges, Clerk Says, "But Didn't Vote That Way."

Borough Clerk A. O. Bixler, who went to New Kensington yesterday to aid the West Side Firemen in their effort to hold the convention for 1913, commented on the methods employed by the competing towns to hold the meet. The signs told of the promises of various delegations to vote for Connellsville and of their subsequent failure to do so.

"Nearly everybody I saw," said the borough clerk, "wore Connellsville badges. Had they voted according to the badges they wore, Connellsville would have won in a walk."

OFFICERS BREAK UP HOBO KEG PARTY IN SOUTH SIDE

Two members of "Party" Locked Up in Cages for 72 Hours.

Police yesterday broke up a "keg party" at the old Crosson works in the South Side, arrested two members of the party and locked them up in the city cages. Complaints were made to the officers that the roustabouts were creating a big disturbance and that some residents were afraid to leave their homes. Chief George Hetzel and Officer John A. Lowe interrupted the party and caused the arrest. The two prisoners were given 72 hours in the lockup by Burgess Evans at the hearing yesterday evening.

CARCASS OF MULE FOUND IN POLECAT WORKINGS

Officials Believe That 13 Bodies Yet In the Mine May Be Recovered Soon.

Surveyors with an unknown mission are working near Ohiopyle and eight of the river town have taken it to mean that the Western Maryland has ordered a survey of the property there before purchasing the former Elco mine with a view to improving it as a summer resort. Harry Marlett, lessee of the Elco, said this morning that he had heard only rumors of the contemplated purchase.

Officials of the Kendall Lumber Company were silent today as to the purchase.

Burglars GET SILVERWARE, BURGLARS IN HOME OF MRS. JOHNSON, ON FRANCIS AVENUE.

When Mrs. Johnson, engaged, returned to her home on Francis avenue yesterday evening after attending a picnic, she found that burglars had forced an entrance into the building and had stolen some silverware and a pocket. The robbery was reported to the police. There is no clue as to the identity of the burglars.

Returning to the kitchen at her home on North Pittsburg street after an absence of about five minutes, Mrs. Rice Lyons discovered that an alarm clock, on a shelf in the kitchen had been stolen. It is thought that the same thief who entered the Johnson home on Johnson avenue was responsible for the theft.

Several other deals are about consummated and all have promise of a lively season in real estate. The large ready tractors of the past two months have given confidence to the property buyers. Several real estate men said this morning that the real estate business is on the up-grade and is of normal design.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA. THURSDAY EVE'G, AUG. 15, 1912.

LOCAL FIREMEN BIG ATTRACTION IN NEW KENSINGTON PARADE

Not "Sore" Over Losing the Next Annual Convention.

PUNXSUTAWNEY WINS EASILY

Merchants Today Close Stores During the Big Parade. Connellsville Military Band Arrived This Morning. Bare Feet Parade Tonight.

Connellsville's Volunteer Fire Department, headed by the Connellsville Military Band, will occupy a prominent place in the big parade at New Kensington this afternoon. The local firemen lost out yesterday in their efforts to land the 1913 convention of the Western Pennsylvania association, but undaunted, they will join the Punxsutawney firemen next year in making the convention a success there.

Pittsburgh firemen and other departments in the Monongahela valley worked for Punxsutawney yesterday on the ground that Connellsville once had entertained the association and that "Punxy" had not yet been accorded that honor.

Jeannette was not even a good third in the race. Connellsville was passed at that place was bequeathed to the church as a parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. Whit will occupy the home for the first time upon their return.

Rev. and Mrs. Whit had been visiting Mrs. E. E. Whit of Washington avenue. The Rev. Whit occupied the pulpit at the Baptist church last Sunday.

The Connellsville Military Band arrived in New Kensington this morning with a big squad of Scottish firemen and lead a parade to the Franklin hotel where the Connellsville delegation is making its headquarters. Shouts greeted the appearance of the Connellsville bandmen and they are making but hit in the Convention City.

New Kensington merchants at noon today closed their shops in preparation for the parade.

Early today a water battle was fought between companies from Arnold and Punxsutawney, with bows and arrows. Following the spectacular parade this afternoon, hand-to-hand and horse-play are on the official program, ending up with a bare feet parade tonight.

Despatched mail yesterday afternoon's session of the Firemen's Association. For over half an hour everyone remained in the theater and but for the action of John E. Lowers of Bradlock, the convention might have ended in a disorder.

After the reports of the tellers in the annual election of officers held yesterday morning was read the dates from the West View Fire Company were read and protested against the illegal methods they alleged were used in the election. The West Viewers said that at least a dozen men had voted several times and some as high as 10 times. In fiery speeches they challenged the election.

Cries of "Throw them out," and "Put the steam roller on them," were heard.

President J. J. McFadden of West Park, Stowe township, rapped repeatedly for order, but the protesting delegates refused to take their seats.

Others arose and heatedly resented the statements of the West Viewers. For a time all the delegates were on their feet and everyone was clamoring for recognition by the chair.

Rain fell heavily during the afternoon yesterday, somewhat dampening the ardor of the visitors and delegates.

David L. McCallum, who attempted suicide while locked in jail early yesterday morning, is a member of Company K, Sixteenth Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, and resides at Kittanning. He was arrested for violating a city ordinance by loitering on the streets.

When given a hearing before Burgess E. Henderson he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 10 days in the county jail.

It is now thought by the mine officials that it will be but a short time until the 13 bodies yet unaccounted for from the workings will be recovered.

The electric pump, which was submerged by the flood, was placed in operation last night and thousands of gallons of water are being removed from the flooded mine.

The extra demand for pumps to empty the mines in the region of the water caused by the flood of July 24 is nearly over. Local companies received large orders for pumps.

A telegram to James Reed of Vanderhill, yesterday from Detroit, carried the news that Wendell Fuller, aged 23, of Upper Middletown, had lost his life in a trolley accident. Fuller was employed as a motorman by a Detroit traction company and it is thought that he lost his life in a collision. The telegram was sent by Walter Fuller, a brother of the dead man. He will bring the body back today. The telegram stated that Fuller was hurt at 7 o'clock and that he died at 9 o'clock.

Wendell Fuller lived in Upper Middletown and was well known here. His uncle, Frank Reed, is a resident of the West Side. He had worked for a number of years for the Union Supply Company at Butler, Junta and other coke region points. He had also been in the employ of the Kolster Coal Company at Upper Middletown.

The deceased, while in the employ of the Union Supply Company, failed in health and left for the west. He had been in the employ of the Detroit Traction Company for about a year.

Last spring his brother, Walter, left for Detroit and entered the employ of the traction company. Both were employed as motormen.

Fuller is survived by his mother, Mrs. Emma Fuller, four sisters, Ruth, Elizabeth and May, and two brothers, Walter and Charles. Funeral services will be held Saturday at the Upper Middletown Methodist Episcopal church. Friends and relatives of the deceased will meet at the home of Walter, left for Detroit and entered the employ of the traction company. Both were employed as motormen.

It has developed now, it is said, that a young niece of Gettys and his son also were bitten by the dog.

A further outbreak of rabies will be followed by a state quarantining on all dogs, extending over a period of 100 days, said Sherrick. The state authorities have expressed concern over the number of mad dogs here recently and have advised the local veterinarian to exercise due caution.

The placing of a state quarantine on dogs would include all hunting dogs and would embarrass greatly the local hunters who live themselves to the woods occasionally during the hunting season.

Such a quarantining was exercised here a few years ago but some complaints were lodged regarding its enforcement and Sherrick said that should a quarantining be necessary this year, he would demand that a representative of the state board be sent here to enforce quarantining regulations and to kill all dogs running at large.

The law had decreed that each one
of the seven had been concerned in the
taking of a human life and, therefore,
should be made to pay the penalty.

Five of the seven went to their death crying out in their frenzied mother tongue that they were innocent;
that they had been given "chance"
to prove their innocence; that they were being punished. One of the seven went to his death unconscious. The great fear had tightened its hold upon the heart and the condemned man slipped unknowing to his fate.

The seven were electrocuted. The first walked to his death from his cell. And the six who remained knew of his departure. There was the clang of the door. The murderer left the death chair, struggled with its straps; the current was turned on and there was in the close little room the odor of burning human flesh. Then one by one the bodies were piled in the trough.

It was a carnival of death. Nothing that the humanized expected was ever more terrible than that death chamber at Sing Sing. Viewed passionately, the only reason why those seven should have been killed was in order to deter others. And yet there are eleven other men awaiting death in Sing Sing prison. Murder is increasing. It seems that punishment never fails to deter the murderer.

death penalty for human error. To make a death penalty defensible it would be necessary to back it with infinite knowledge.

Were the men who in the face of death cried out in the glory of the morning at Sing Sing today that they were innocent, really guilty? Who knows? That's it, who knows? Surely there is a doubt.

There are those who in the matter of divorce say "What God has joined together let no man put asunder." That command applies to a man and his wife. But is it not even more serious to divorce a man's body and his soul, to decree dissolution for a God-made entity? It is not a just thought that in matters of punishment there should be a margin for human error? In the death penalty there is no such margin.

The story of the butchery at Sing Sing is a blot. There are 11 more there who must die. How much better for the public it would be were those 11 men to be forgotten behind prison walls to be called when the Master of the future required them before His throne to make their answer for the "deeds done in the flesh."

Telephone Men Held Up by Woman.
MONONGAHELA, August 15.—The construction men for the Bell Telephone Company have a job on their hands in Lawrence street which they
are at their wits ends to put through to their own advantage. They are moving a pole from one location on
the street to another and in the new location the pole would be directly in front of the gate leading into one of the residences of that thoroughfare. One of the ladies of the house is determined that the pole shall not be placed in the new location, but compromises and
says that it can be placed at that corner
of the street. This does not suit
the company and the location they desire does not suit the resident. Hence
the trouble. In the meantime the lady sits contentedly on her porch with the garden hose already connected and in easy reach, determined to turn the flow on the first telephone man that gives her.

COKE MAY GO $2.75
BEFORE DECEMBER 1
IS THE PREDICTION

Steadily Increasing Pig Iron Production Leads to Rise Prediction.

CONTRACTS ON FOR FURNACES

After Wait Since May, When Early Orders Were Closed, Sales Arrangements are in Full Sway; Rise to $2.50 Forecast for October.

From The Weekly Courier.
PITTSBURG, August 15.—Contracting for furnace coke has been resumed, after a long wait since early contracts were closed last May. It is understood that the Producers' Coke Company has closed four or five contracts in the past week, aggregating 20,000 or 25,000 tons a month for the balance of this year, one contract calling for 8,000 tons a month, another for 6,000 tons, and others for various other quantities. While there is some uncertainty as to the prices involved in the contracts, it is understood that none of the coke went at less than $2.25, and some of it may have brought slightly more, as it is claimed that some furnaces have bid $2.30 for certain brands of coke.

Contracting for furnace coke is now fully under way and the prediction is that prices will advance as further sales are made on the basis that with steadily increasing pig iron production there will not be enough coke to go around, and in some well informed quarters the conviction is expressed that coke will be $2.50 before October 1, with the prospect that it will reach $2.75 before December 1.

Many of the furnaces have not ordered yet, and those have been buying prompt and nearby coke, some taking small lots and others enough to round out their requirements for this month. Altogether it may be estimated that between 20,000 and 25,000 tons of prompt and nearby coke has been purchased in the past week, a portion of it at $2.20 but the major part at $2.25. Below this price it is said no seller is gone and it is represented that it has been easy to secure $2.25 from any buyer really needing coke of good quality. The market stands as quoted on the lower.

Imports from China $2.00
Imports from Japan $2.00
Imports from Australia $2.00
Coke from Canada $2.00
Coke from U. S. $2.00

Now that the question of coke prices is practically settled, there is more disposition on the part of all furnaces to buy in, and there is also more disposition to advance pig iron prices. Some furnaces have already gone into blast. The second hundred stack of the Andis & Hitachi Iron Company went in on August 1, while the Alpinia No. 1 of the Jorges &

Loughlin Steel Company and Robecca of the Kittanning Iron & Steel Company blew in late last week. A furnace of the Valley Mold & Foundry Company, at Sharpsville, will go into blast in a few weeks, and it is stated that the prospective output has already well taken care of, while Allegheny furnace at Grand, O., and two others at No. 2, at Josephine, Pa., will likely go into blast in September.

Pig iron prices have been advancing. There is no more $1.50 Valley, but iron to be had, all the furnaces now quoting $14 or $14.25, and it is claimed also that there is no more coke money at $14. Valley, there being a question whether any could be secured at under $14. Foundry iron has advanced 50 cents to $14. Valley, and a number of small sales have been made at this figure in the past few days.

Stocks of merchant pig iron in Western Pennsylvania and the Valleys have been thoroughly cleaned up in the past few months, and a point has been reached where one or two of the furnace interests are actually short of iron, in some cases to the extent of buying iron on the outside to make up contracts, all of which indicates that the long expected movement in pig iron prices, now started, is likely to carry the market to a substantially higher level.

Owensdale.

OWENSDALE, August 15.—Lloyd Robbins, captain and catcher of the Scottdale Independent team, will go to the Continental No. 1 Fitch league team, he having accepted a position with the Fitch team. Lee and Ray Klingensmith, Andrew Thomas, Frank Kane and Robbins, all of the old No. 1 team, are now to be seen in the Continental No. 1 lineup. Other former and former players at Continental No. 1 are John and Henry Buchheit, Warren Burke. Other players from the Morgan valley who have made good in baseball are "Jack" Fred and Dale McMeney, Robert Storrett, Edward Haas, Stafford Paige, Lee Herrington, Sander Hollen, James Keegan and Markey Colvin.

CHAPTER IX.

In Which the Author Trespasses.

This narrative has quite as much to do with the Bazilhurst side of the controversy as it has with Shaw's. It is therefore but fair that the heroic invasion by Lord Cecil should receive equal consideration from the historian Shaw's conquest of one member of the force opposing him was scarcely the result of bravery; on the other hand Lord Cecil's dash into the enemy's country was the very essence of impetuosity.

Down the drive and out into the mountain road clattered the three horsemen. Lady Bazilhurst, watching at the window, censured, almost swooned with amazement at the sight of them. The capes of their mackintoshes seemed to flaunt a satirical farewell in her face; their owners, following the light of the carriage lamps, swept from view around a bend in the road and bravely plunged into the dark territory over which the enemy ruled.

It was the duke who finally brought the envoys to a halt by propounding a most sensible question.

"Are you sure the cause this way, Cecil?"

"Certainly. This is Shaw's way, isn't it?"

"Did she say she was going to Shaw?"

"Don't know. Evelyn told me Haug it all. Bazilhurst, come along. We'll never catch up to her."

"Is she riding?"

"No—horses all in."

"Do you know, we may have passed her. Devereux take it, Bazilhurst. If she's running away from us, you don't know she'd be such a silly fool as to stand in the road and wait for us. If she heard us she'd hide among the trees."

"But she's had no hour's start of us."

"Where does she come to?" asked the count, with an anxious glance upward, just in time to catch a glimmering raindrop with his eye.

"That's just it. We don't know," said the duke.

"But I must find her!" cried Lord Cecil. "Think of that poor girl alone in this terrible place, storm coming up and all that. It's Penelope!" he shouted in his most vociferous trouble. The same shrill wind replied. Then the three of them shouted her name. "Good, she is as lost or dead as—Come on, Bazilhurst. We must scour the whole damned country."

"He's like a wildcat tonight," said the duke in an aside to the little Frenchman, referring to his lordship.

"Devereux, I'd rather not cross him. You seem to forget that his sister is out in all this fury."

"Mon Dieu, but I do not forget. I would give half my life to hold her in my arms these few minutes."

"Dear you, sir, I'd give her the other half if you dared try such a think. We didn't for a you along to hold her. You've got to hold the horses, that's all."

"Devereux, how dare you to speak to—"

"What are you two rowing about?" demanded his lordship. "Come along! We're losing time."

Away they swept. Penelope's two aduersaries warily hating at one another about satisfaction at some future hour.

The storm burst upon them in all its fury—the maddest, wildest storm they had known in all their lives. Tossed, half drowned, blown almost from the saddles, the trio finally found shelter in the lee of a shelving cliff just off the road. While they stood there shivering, clutching the bits of their well-nigh frantic horses, the glimmer of lights came down to them from windows farther up the steep. There was no mistaking the three upright oblongs of light. They were tall windows in a house, the occupants of which doubtless had been aroused at this unexpected hour by the ferocious of the storm.

"My Jove," lamented the duke, water running down his neck in floods, "what a luxury a house is in it ever to humble, on a night like this."

"Mon Dieu, mon Dieu," groaned the count, "how comfortless you look! And here? Eh bien! Qui fait trembler la terre! I am sick! I die!"

"Penelope is out in all this," moaned his lordship.

"I am not so sure of that. Trust a woman to find a place where she can't ruin her hat. My word for it, Cecil, she's found a safe roost. I say, by Jove!" The duke was staring more intently than ever at the windows far above. "I have it! Isn't it rather odd that a house should be lighted so belatedly at this hour of night?"

"Deserved servants forgot to put out the lamps," groaned Bazilhurst with a shiver.

"Now—now—now I tell you what—some one has roused the house and asked Bazilhurst from the storm. Now, who could that be but Penelope?"

"By Jove, you're a rippling clever one, after all, Bazilhurst—the regular Sherlock Holmes. That's just it. She's up there where the windows are. Come on. It's easy sailing now," cried his lordship, but the duke restrained him.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whose house is it?"

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's house, and he hasn't been especially cordial about—"

and pound on the door. You've got a card, you know."

"Quo dubile!" exclaimed the count, sinking into the background.

"We might reconnoiter a bit," said Bazilhurst. "Have a look at the rear, you know."

Around the corner of the house they trudged, finally breaking up at the back steps. The windows were not only dark, but boarded up. While they stood there amazed and uncertain, the rain came down again in torrents, worse than before if possible. They scurried for cover, plunking three abreast beneath the same steps that had sheltered Penelope and Shaw such a short time before.

"Ow! Get off my foot!" roared the duke.

"Ow! Who are you pushing, domine! Hullo! What's this? A door and open, as I live!" The trio entered the cellar door without ceremony.

"Thank God, we're out of the rain at last!"

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whose house is it?"

It was not until they had explored the basement and found it utterly without signs of human occupancy that the truth of the situation began to dawn upon them. Bazilhurst's face was white, and his voice shook as he ventured the horrid speculation: "The good Lord save us—it's that damned haunted house Pen was talking about!"

"But ze lights?" queried the count.

"'Zo, said Shaw from the other side: 'she shant'."

"By Jove, Shaw, are you with me?" demanded his lordship in surprise.

"Depends on whether you are with me," said the other. Penelope flushed.

Hot coffee, chops, griddle cakes and maple syrup soon put the contending forces at their ease. Bazilhurst so far forgot himself as to laugh merrily at his host's jokes. The count responded in his most piquant dialect, and the duke swore by an ever-useful Lord Harry that he had never tasted such a breakfast.

"By Jove, Pen!" exclaimed her brother in rare good humor. "It's almost a sin to take you away from such good cooking as this."

"You're not going to take her away, however," said Shaw. "She has come to stay."

"What—what the devil do you mean, sir?" demanded Lord Cecil. His coffee cup started so violently that the contents overflowed.

"She's going over to Pittsburgh with me today, and when she comes back

nestly. "She shant' treat my sister like this again."

"No," said Shaw from the other side: "she shant'."

LOCAL FANS INTERESTED IN OUTLAW O. & P.'S BREAK

Pittsburg Club, Success of East Liverpool, Lost Opening Game in Smoky City Yesterday.

The action of the Old & Penny League in breaking away from organized baseball and invading the fair of the Phila-baseball fans has raised considerable comment among local fans. The opening game of the new Pittsburg club, which took over the East Liverpool franchise of the O. & P. League, was played in Pittsburgh yesterday and the new organization was topped in both ends of a double header at Exposition park while the Pittsies were giving the Phillips two black eyes at Forbes Field.

President George T. Travis of the outlaw organization, which the O. & P. has become, was in the grandstand and witnessed both Pittsburg games. He announced that the new club would upon Nation's League territory, had been pre-arranged, but that the in the had not been brought in to the notice of the baseball commission. That made little difference, so he said. If the O. & P. League could break off, so can the wiz the club is made up of present, he will be satisfied. There is no chance to do so, in other way.

He said that he thought the Ohio Penn circuit would be able to organize on a better basis next summer when some of the cities in the 12 City Central League dropped from the organization, but the Pittsburg was of most hope for the wiz. He said that promoters realize the gravity of their offense and that it will probably ban them from playing ball, but that it was a matter of life or death. In the opinion the little lads got all the best of the deal from the power of baseball as conditions now stand.

OPPOSITION DOESN'T WORRY MANAGER ROBBINS

Soisson Will Open With First Class Bookings for the Season During September.

The impending opposition in the local theatre field brought on by the purchase of the Colonial theatre and apartment by downtown people is not worrying Manager Fred Robbins of the Soisson Theatre. Manager Robbins is just completing an attractive set of buildings for appearance at the downtown playhouse during the coming season.

The opening date originally set for early in September has been postponed owing to a changing of routing by the company. The theatre will be opened during September with a first class production.

Fairmont Fans Like the Change. Fairmont fans think the change in the makeup of the Ohio & Penny baseball league will be for the ultimate betterment of the organization, which by Pittsburg sources is held. The addition of such players as Marion Philippi to the lineup of the visiting teams is sure to add local interest to the game, say the aficionados.

Williams Gives Neither Runs Nor Hits. Williams of Bridgeport is held in an O & P. record when he shut St. Louis out without a run or a hit in the second game Sunday of the Subs nearly duplicated the feat following Bridgeport's one-sided win. Bill Williams is a new man and only has been pitching for the team since Bridgeport was added to the league.
